15 10,	) Complaint Filed: 02/10/2010
16 Defendant.	) Trial Date: 07/11/2011
	)

17 WHEREAS, counsel for Plaintiff and Defendant have conferred regarding continuing the 18 scheduled discovery and motion cut-off dates in order to pursue settlement efforts.

19 In light of the current time perimeters and the parties' immediate desire to attempt to resolve 20 the case, the parties move to continue the discovery cut-off and dispositive motion deadline two 21 weeks from their scheduled dates to March 14, 2011 and March 31, 2011, respectively.

22 In that regard, counsel have had multiple discussions over the last few days regarding 23 settlement, but are currently engaged in completing discovery. As a result, settlement dialogue and 24 more importantly, attending a mediation, is impacted by this and the discovery cut-off date of 25 February 28, 2011. The parties have been actively participating in discovery, including depositions, 26 extensive document production and experts. Presently, additional percipient depositions, along with 27 the experts, remain to be completed. It is proposed that all these events be put off until after the 28 mediation. The parties anticipate the mediation will occur by February 28, 2011 with private

1 mediator, Tom Denver of Mediation Masters. However, this would need to be conditioned upon 2 the court's willingness to continue the discovery dates as requested. This will allow the parties to 3 focus on settlement efforts, as well as avoid the cost involved with the remaining discovery.

4 In addition and since the parties are contemplating filing Summary Judgments, it is also 5 necessary to continue the dispositive motion cut off in the same manner.

6 At the last case management hearing, Judge Koh encouraged the parties to pursue settlement
7 efforts and offered the court's assistance in this regard. After conducting the discovery to date, the 8 parties believe they are in a position to participate in good faith settlement negotiations. Finally, 9 the short continuance would not affect the court's scheduled trial date.
